

Dandruff Surely Destroys the Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and thin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you

"WE HAVE THE SUBMARINE VIRTUALLY BEATEN" --- SIMS

(By Fred J. Wilson, General Manager of International News Service.)
(Copyright by the International News Service, 1918.)

London, May 24.—"We have the submarine virtually beaten. Co-ordination between the fleets of the allies is a done job. German diver crews are pretty sick and are getting sicker every day."

Thrusting out a fighting jaw and snapping his teeth with a determined click, Admiral Sims, commander-in-chief of the American naval forces in European waters, thus summed up the naval situation to me today in the naval building in Grosvenor Gardens.

The admiral was loud in his praise of the allied sailors and declared that the harmony between them and the Yankee jacksies could not be more cordial.

"The navies of the allies are working together as comrades in practically all areas of naval operations," said Admiral Sims.

"Their mixed forces are under the direction of a senior allied commander. There is no continuous naval front, but there are several fronts. Each one has its naval force, and the work of all is co-ordinated by the allied naval council."

"The recent glorious exploits of the British navy at Zeebrugge and Ostend blocked these submarine holes, at least for the time being. I am sure that there is no American who is not thrilled to hear of these gallant deeds—unsurpassed even in the annals of the British navy."

"We have mastered the submarine. We have it so that it would starve England and proven it false. The boast that it would stop American forces from reaching the battlefields in France has been proven foolish. With the British navy, the French navy and the Italian navy, the American navy has co-operated and I can safely say we are well on the road to winning."

"We shall do the job completely. Germany's hope of crippling the allies at sea is rapidly fading."

"When the German people know it has faded it will not be an easy job for the Kaiser and his junkies to lead them forward into successive and hopeless shambles of blood and misery."

"The extremely effective way in which we have been able to co-operate with our naval allies is the best evidence that a united command is entirely feasible."

"There has been no question of precedence between us. If three American destroyers, say, and the British go out on a mission, the senior officer is in command. If he is a Briton he takes charge of all, if an American he is in command of the entire flotilla. There has not been a single instance in which allied officers and sailors have not worked in utter harmony and I am glad to say our own American officers and men have met them with as free a hand."

Settling down in an arm chair before a big desk piled with papers the American admiral then smiled quizzically and said:

"There is just one thing more. Because we have been fairly successful and perhaps because a large proportion of Americans are not seafaring people I am told there is an idea that American sailors are having rather an easy time of it. Our boys are taking turn about with the allied navies. We do not have their age nor their old traditions of victories on the blue, but we have as gallant men and though their deeds will not be known until after the war is won, I can assure you that all American citizens may well be proud of them."

"In the long days and nights, in calm and storm they do their work beside the best of the allied seamen. They have earned the praise of their allied comrades. Should it come they will die as nobly as the best."

The foregoing is the first interview given out by Admiral Sims since he was put in command of the American naval forces in European waters.

THERE'LL BE WORK FOR EVERY GIRL WHEN NEW DRAFT LAW APPLIES

Some Employees Fear They Can't Operate High Speed Elevators,
"Jerk" Soda or Climb Shoe Store Ladders in Bloomers, However.

"I hired two pretty girls, real swell looking, and put 'em behind my counter. In two weeks one of them had married, and the other was going to be, so I fired her. I was trying to run a soda fountain, not a marriage bureau."

"No, if the army grabs my clerks, and it will get seven of my men, they'll just have to go. I can't replace them. I already know of 136 drug stores which have had to close on account of the draft, but I won't try any more girls at my soda fountain."

Good as "Hashers."

William Bruckner, manager of Thompson's restaurant, stated that he would lose twelve men whom he could replace with girls. Speaking of restaurants and hotels, girls seem to be the general substitute for these places, except in the kitchen. Oddly enough, restaurant cooking seems to be a bit too strenuous.

Mr. Chris Timothy, of the dry goods store, stated that he had not given the matter much thought, but that he is Irish, and so he will certainly give any openings in his establishment to women.

New drastic reclassification laws have set Chattanooga business men in a fever of readjustment. All clerks, ushers and elevator men have been transferred automatically from deferred classification to Class 1.

A census of the business men shows that Chattanooga is preparing to make a heavy draft on the girls for labor when the showdown comes on July 1. In many cases, however, proprietors declare that women cannot do their work; the shoe men, hardware men, and, oddly enough, soda water men, are in this category.

"I have tried girls as soda jerkers," said Jo Anderson, of the drug store, by the same name, "and I couldn't use them. They made a society event out of a soda fountain instead of business."

All Get Married.
L. D. Bailey, of the Rogers-Bailey Hardware company, said that their entire force were young men and nearly all of draft age.

Hardware Too Heavy.
"We are just waiting to see what the government wants," said Mr. Bailey, "and we are glad to give our whole force if they are asked. We will replace them, if possible, with older men. Women could not be used in a hardware store; the work is too difficult and requires too much physical exertion."

The Evans-Hedges Shoe company will lose three men. These will be replaced by older men. "It takes men to fit shoes," said the manager, "and an experienced man, at that. I think a woman would get them forever too small—unless she were fitting her enemy. Besides, they wouldn't look right climbing up and down ladders." When bloomers were suggested the manager was even more positive that women in bloomers wouldn't do.

The B. E. Loveman company does not work more than seventy-five men, while about 1,200 women are employed. A few of these men may go in the draft, but Mr. Loveman did not think they could be replaced by women. "We will get older men," he said.

Too Much Speed.

Carl Painter, manager of the Hamilton National bank, stated that he could not use girls to run his elevators. "They haven't the self-possession to handle high-speed elevators," declared Mr. Painter. "I would be afraid to risk them with so many lives. I must have older men. I believe some modification of the law as at present projected will be made. It seems very sweeping as it stands."

E. D. Rule, proprietor of the Grand billiard parlor, is thinking of trying the novel plan of using colored girls to wait on his billiard tables. "We billiard men have been talking it over," said Mr. Rule, "and we have come to the decision that it may be colored girls or nothing with our business. However, the government can have every man in my employ and me, too, if it wants me. I can always close up shop and quit."

May Have Girl Bell Hops.

The Patten hotel may substitute girls for bell hops, waiters, etc. As it stands it will lose six men. The manager, Mr. Harper, stated that he thought girls could even be used on the high-speed elevators.

ANGRY CITIZENS STORM THOMPSON RESTAURANT

Birmingham, Ala., May 24.—The palatial restaurant of John H. Thompson in this city, one of a chain of such places operated throughout the United States by John R. Thompson, incorporated of Chicago, was stormed and practically wrecked this afternoon by a mob of angry citizens following the company's action yesterday in refusing to join the other restaurants of the city in voluntarily eliminating wheat products from its menu. Manager Wood, of the restaurant, was chased down the street by the mob. He was later taken in charge by a committee of three citizens, who took him to police headquarters, where he is being protected.

WATERPOWER BILL PASSES INTO DOUBTFUL COLUMN

McAdoo Concerned Over Leasing of Sites Needed for Electrification Railway System.

Washington, May 24.—The administration in the class "doubtful of passage at this session" today.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo is reported to have become alarmed that water power sites needed for the electrification of the railway systems under his control may be leased to private enterprises under the bill to the disadvantage of the railroads. He is said to have convinced the president that more time for consideration of all possible ultimate results should be given before the bill is placed on the legislative calendar.

Meanwhile the fight to take the leasing power from the hands of the secretaries of war, agriculture and interior and place it in the hands of a nonpartisan commission holding office for a long term continued in the house water power committee. Robert J. Bulkley, attorney for the war industries board, appeared before the foreign affairs committee of the house today urging that the Flood bill for the leasing of power sites on boundary waters be passed as a war emergency measure. The bill is a companion piece of legislation to the omnibus water power bill in the hands of the water power committee. It would give the leasing power of sites on boundary waters to the secretary of war.

MALCONTENTS IN AUSTRO-SILESIA ARE GERMANS

(Associated Press.)

Amsterdam, May 23.—Another feature in the turmoil between the nationalities of Austria-Hungary, which recent occurrences in Bohemia have brought to the fore, is the situation in Moravia and Galicia. An anti-government feeling, news of which was suppressed by the local authorities, took place a few days ago at Tropau. The malcontents in this case, among whom Count Lariach was prominent, are Germans, who rage fiercely against the Austrian government, as do the Czechs.

Their chief grievances are that the government favors the anti-German party at the expense of Germans whom it purposely neglects, and that Polish agitators are appointed to important positions, especially in eastern Galicia. It is alleged that the aim of the agitators is to join Silesia and Galicia, with the ultimate object of joining both to Poland. The malcontents demand counter-measures and threaten to go to the extreme length of opposition.

SINN FEIN EDITOR, MICHAEL LENNON, UNDER ARREST

Man Who Was Expected to Carry on Rebellion Taken in Custody.

(Associated Press.)

Dublin, May 24.—Michael Lennon, who was arrested here last night, is a member of the Sinn Fein executive committee, and the editor of Young Ireland, one of the Sinn Feiners' little weekly papers. He was arrested for active participation in the rebellion of 1916 and since his release under amnesty has been imprisoned, charged with making seditious speeches. He was one of the men expected to carry on the movement during the absence of those arrested on Saturday. His arrest indicates that the government is familiar not only with the Sinn Fein leaders, but also with their substitutes and will take precaution accordingly. Five more arrests have been made. Mrs. Thomas J. Clark and the prisoners taken since her arrest were deported to England last night.
